At Bank of America, we believe in the power of the arts to help economies thrive, educate and enrich societies, and create greater cultural understanding. That’s why we are a leader in helping the arts flourish across the globe, supporting more than 2,000 nonprofit cultural institutions each year.

Our arts support is wide ranging. We believe the neighborhood playhouse can be as important as the world-class museum or orchestra in its value to the community, in the lives of its citizens and in the education of its young people. A key component of our arts program is to help nonprofit institutions illuminate varied cultural traditions and to help the arts sector create pathways for more diverse employment and engagement.

The Bank of America Art Program is part of the company’s commitment to grow responsibly while bringing value to economies, society and the communities we serve.

“Bank of America knows that not only do the arts create economic value in communities, but they also foster great learning, great thinking and create greater cultural understanding,” said Raul A. Anaya, Los Angeles market president, Bank of America. “We are proud of our partnership with the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and our support of Frank Stella: Selections from the Permanent Collection.”
